Under New U.N. Proposal For Problem Of Arab Refugees They Could Express Preferences Privately

Israel and the Arab States have received a new plan for resolving the thorny problem of the Palestinian Arab refugees. The plan was drafted by Dr. Joseph E. Johnson, who has been serving as special representative of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, says the New York Times. The commission is composed of the United States, France, and Turkey.

United States authorities have confirmed that the three-member commission has approved an attempt by Dr. Johnson to get Israel and the Arabs to agree on his plan for finding permanent homes for the refugees. Since the Palestine war of May to July, 1948, uprooted them, the refugees have been living in Arab countries bordering Israel.

Dr. Johnson's proposals include one to enable the refugees to express their preferences for a return to their old homes now in Israel, to new sites in Israel, or to accept resettlement in the Arab lands or elsewhere.

The core of the problem has been that the Arab states who are now "hosts" to the refugees, want them returned to Israel. Israel insists that she cannot absorb an influx of hostile and impoverished Arabs, whose number has grown to more than a million.

Dr. Johnson's proposals would allow the refugees to express their preferences privately, with the provision that they could change their minds later. Another feature would permit Israel to reject individual Arabs as security risks. With outside financial help, Israel would be expected to compensate the Arabs for lost properties, such as farms and homes.

The United Nations would help the integration of the Arabs through a special fund made up of voluntary contributions from governments and other sources, says the New York Times. The United Nations also would try to assist refugees seeking resettlement in the Arab lands or in other countries.

One proposal calls for the appointment of a new administrator and a staff to pursue the new effort to solve the refugee problem. The cost of this would be included in the regular United Nations budget. There would also be a council of advisers to the administrator including representatives from Israel and the Arab host states — the United Arab Republic, Syria, Jordan, and Lebanon.

Dr. Johnson's proposals made it clear that the refugees would not necessarily get their first choice on where they would live.

Dr. Johnson also has proposed that the United Nations be responsible for informing the refugees of their prospects and making their alternatives clear.

Whenever the issue has been debated at the United Nations in the past, it has been asserted that the refugees, who left their homes 13 or 14 years ago, would not be returning to the same living conditions.

Half of the refugees cared for by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency are living in camps, mainly in Jordan and the Gaza area of the United Arab Republic. More than 90 per cent of the annual budget of $33,000,000 for the refugee program has been contributed by Britain and the United States.

The Arab states and Israel have withheld official comment on the proposals. Neutral observers expect that both sides will find objections to this latest plan. The issue will come up for debate later in the Special Political Committee, says the New York Times. The Arab states already have indicated that they would take the position that the United States decision to supply missiles to Israel has created new tensions in the Middle East and that this lessens chances of progress on the refugee issue.

Consul Was Only Jew To Serve As Lithuanian Diplomat

Henrikas Rabinavicius, former Lithuanian Consul General in New York, died at Weston, Conn., apparently of a heart attack, in his home on Beaverbrook Road. He was 70 years old and also lived at 46 East End Avenue, New York.

In 1927, Mr. Rabinavicius, who was described as the only Jew to have served in the Lithuanian diplomatic service, resigned as Consul General, says the New York Times, after Premier Augustinas Waldemaras, of Lithuania, stated that he wanted his country's New York representative to be "a Lithuanian, not a Jew." Mr. Rabinavicius then said that "this incident should not call for general accusation of the Lithuanian people or the Lithuanian Government of systematic anti-Semitism."

He later returned to the Lithuanian diplomatic service and served as charge d'affaires in Moscow from 1930 to 1935 and at Court of St. James's from 1935 to 1940.

After the Soviet Union took control of Lithuania he came to the United States and became a citizen. In World War II he was a consultant to the Office of Strategic Services.

Mr. Rabinavicius, born in Lithuania, was educated at the Universities of Dorpat, Leningrad and London. He entered his country's diplomatic service as a young man and served on the Curzon Line Commission, which defined the boundaries of the Baltic States. Before serving in New York, he was first secretary of the Lithuanian Legation in Washington.

He had written for periodicals and lectured on Soviet Baltic affairs. Mr. Rabinavicius was a member of the British Universities Club of New York, says the New York Times. Surviving are his widow, the former Miss Ethel Edna Kabat; a daughter, Mrs. Nancy C. Galpin, of London; two sisters; and two grandchildren.

N.Y. Jewish Federation, World's Largest Community Philanthropy, Seeks $22.5 Million By January 31

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York started its 46th annual campaign with a record goal of $22,500,000 for maintaining its 116 affiliated medical and welfare institutions. These institutions serve more than 850,000 New Yorkers of all races and faiths, says the New York Times. Bernard J. Lasker, chairman of the appeal, outlined the campaign at the Federation's headquarters at 130 East 59th Street.

He cited three major factors for the Federation's higher goal for 1962-63: a rise of at least 10 per cent in the number of persons who will receive help from federation agencies next year; the higher cost of supplies, services, wages, and equipment; and an increase in the number of agencies receiving support from the Federation.

He pointed out that in the past year the Federation network was extended to include the Home and Hospital of the Daughters of Jacob; an Orthodox home for the aged in the Bronx; the Jewish Braille Institute; the Hartman-Homecrest Children's Service; three new Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations; and the Jewish Community Center of Staten Island.

Mr. Lasker said that the increasing numbers of aged who turn to the Federation will find more and better residential and community facilities available to serve them. At present, he said, Federation agencies provide care for 300,000 children annually, a figure that rises every year.

Mr. Lasker said that ten years ago it cost $3.25 a day to care for a child in a foster home, and that today it costs $7. The daily cost for child care at a cottage school for disturbed and delinquent children was $6.69 ten years ago, and is now $13.53.

The daily dollar cost of hospital ward care has risen from $16.50 to $33.78 in ten years, Mr. Lasker added. He said that a year's institutional care for a bedridden aged person had jumped from $2,700 to $4,800, says the New York Times. Mr. Lasker emphasized that the "Federation, the world's largest community philanthropy, must meet the largest service budget in its history."

"Federation's efforts to obtain $3.2 million more than it raised last year have been given encouragement by the compilation of the first pledges obtained at our initial advance gifts dinner. Some 205 guests pledged a total of $2,257,000, an increase of 12 per cent over last year.

"Since our drive is the first and largest campaign since the May 28 market break, we believe they demonstrate that increasing numbers of people are being made aware of today's philanthropic needs and are planning to give with even greater generosity than in the past.

"Despite what may be personal financial reverses, they recognize their commitment to care for all who need help."

"Federation, the world's largest community philanthropy, must meet the largest service budgets in its history," Mr. Lasker said. "As a result, we are conducting our most intensive maintenance fund appeal and doing it at a time when admittedly many of our contributors have been affected by market drops and business uncertainty."

To carry out his task, Mr. Lasker, a member of the New York Stock Exchange and a partner of E. H. Stern & Co., has mobilized a task force of 25 associate chairmen; 300 cabinet members; and 15,000 volunteer workers, says the New York Herald Tribune. The funds will support 116 affiliated medical and welfare institutions, caring for more than 850,000 New Yorkers. The drive opened this week at a dinner in the new Hotel Americana. It will close on January 31, 1963.

West Germans Fulfilled Pact To Pay For Nazi War Crimes Against Jews, Credits Israel

Israel credited the West German Government with having faithfully carried out its commitment to pay reparations for Nazi war crimes against Jews. The statement was made in an Israeli report marking the tenth anniversary of the agreement for the payment of compensation aggregating $823,000,000 over twelve to fourteen years.

The agreement was signed in Luxembourg on September 10, 1952 by Chancellor Adenauer for West Germany and Moshe Sharett, then Foreign Minister of Israel. The first shipment of goods sent as reparations reached Haifa on August 10, 1953, says the New York Times. The agreement between the West German Government and Israel was intended to provide reparation for the Nazi persecution of the Jewish people during the period of [illegible].

The West German Government undertook the payments because Israel had received a majority of the Jewish victims of the Nazis. The $823,000,000 total of reparations was to include $107,000,000 for the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany to be used for relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of Nazi victims in need outside of Israel.

The report said the last shipment was due next March 10. Fulfillment of the agreement will thus be completed approximately four years ahead of schedule. Payments, achieved by the granting of purchases on account for the remaining years through intermediate financing.

The report was issued by Dr. Felix E. Shinnar, head of the Israeli purchasing mission in Germany, and Nahum Shamir, director general of the Shilumim (reparations) Corporation. They said goods and services valued at $737,500,000 had already been delivered.

The Israeli merchant marine has been enlarged through reparations by the addition of forty-nine ships aggregating 447,000 tons. A floating drydock, and fishing and coast guard vessels were also supplied by the Adenauer Government at a total cost of $182,000,000.

The report noted that when the reparations program began, in 1953 the Israelis had thirty-one ships aggregating 170,000 tons. The average age of these vessels was twenty-one years.

The supply of equipment for power stations resulted in an increase of annual production from 885,000,000 kilowatt-hours to 1,900,000 kilowatt-hours. The use of modern generators has reduced power costs by 50 per cent.

The reparations program also provided equipment for ports, railways, and telephone systems, water pipelines, an oil pipeline between the Haifa refineries and Tel Aviv, equipment for copper mines in the Negev, chemical and fertilizer works, a potash plant in the Dead Sea and materials used in the processing, says the New York Times. Approximately [illegible] industrial enterprises, [illegible] metal and textile fields, also received equipment.

Bridal Gowns For Autumn Are In "Plastron"

The day of the bouffant bride, swathed from head to toe in lace, is rapidly becoming as passé in fashion circles as high-button shoes. In her place is a shapely pillar whose elegance, usually understated and sometimes molded, is often breath-taking, says the New York Times. This movement towards classicism was demonstrated once again when Bonwit Teller, in New York, unveiled its fall bridal collection.

The emphasis throughout the collection was upon fabrics, many of which are far richer than the laces, silks, and satins so often associated with bridal attire. There were crinkle chiffons and rayon and acetate crepes, wool laces that had a three-dimensional quality, light-weight velvets that shimmered slightly as the wearer moved, acetate failles that looked like ottomans, heavy ottomans, and cut velvets that were opulent.

The day of the seed-pearl seems to be disappearing, too, and crystal beads, which look less shiny than usual, are having their turn. Some of the dresses were chalk white, but most were closer to ivory.

The word being used to describe this classic look is plastron, which is another way of saying that dresses are smoothly fitting and high-necked in front, have side seams and sleeves that end just short of the elbow.

Necklines are rounded or boat-shaped—nary a sweetheart or V in the lot. Waistlines are high and fitted, defined with obi sashes, cummerbunds, or welting, and often elongated.

Bonwit's bridesmaids are equally classic and plastron in look. The trend is toward longer dresses again, and the colors that are shown for fall are old gold and green, says the New York Times. One short dress had a windblown panel from the back to the yoke to the hemline.

My Life In The Lithuanian Village Of Plungian

BY LIPPY LIPSHITZ, CELEBRATED SCULPTOR OF SOUTH AFRICA

I was born in the Lithuanian village of Plungian on the 24th April 1903, according to the old Gregorian Calendar, and a week before Lag B'Omer, according to my mother.

The illusion that I was the first born was dispelled years later, an elder, unmentionable infant brother having died before my birth. I learned also that I was expected to follow him, when only two years old, having contracted a curious disease caused by the evil eye of a Baba Yaga and that I lay moribund and dumb for seven days and nights until the proper antidote of boiled herring eggs, horseradish and a kind of buttermilk called potzmydonker, flavoured with a grated abracadabra was prescribed and forced down my gullet. This broth seems to have precipitated a sequence of malodorous vomits followed by piercing shrieks announcing my return to the Olam Hazeh.

My mother, Chayah Merah, was the eldest daughter of Yankeh Fivah Faktor, a man of many parts, Shamess, builder of wooden synagogues, carver, painter, maker of crystal candelabra, fire engineer and dispenser of curative incantations prefixed to his annotated Book of Psalms of which there are only two copies extant, locked away by my father and uncle Meyer.

Yankeh Fivah and my youngest uncle Yechiel were quite skilful painters of dazzling decors for the festivals, and my aunt, Chana Rocheh was kept busy making Torah coverings and ark-curtains, embroidered with richly coloured wools, and gold and silver thread, depicting grinning lambs, lions and leviathans.

My father, Shlomeh Josef, hailed from Dvinsk on the Dvina. His father, Eliezar Leib, had once owned a flourishing inn near Vitepsk until he was set upon and nearly murdered, and his hearing was permanently impaired. Consequently he became a messhullach — a collector for charitable institutions, patronised by his wealthy Petrograd relatives, the Monnezohns. He preferred this happy-go-lucky vocation, travelling through great and little Russia, squeezing roubles out of the rich for poor orphans and needy scholars, and welcomed everywhere for his jokes and smiroth by the Chassidic Rabbis and negidim and seeing little of his patient wife and family in Dvinsk.

Shifrah Vita, my paternal grandmother, was of proud Sephardic stock. Her family, the Emmanuels, boasted of a family tree with roots in Old Toledo. Their forebears were reputed to have wandered through the centuries from Spain, through Italy, the Bosphorus and the Crimea, and by devious ways and means, to have ended their exodus on the Baltic Coast.

Orphaned at an early age, Shifrah became the ward of her wealthy uncle, the dayan Sousa Emmanuel, who administered the family fortunes to his advantage and who seems to have salvaged his conscience by marrying off his nieces with paltry dowries.

I have no recollection of my paternal grandparents. I cannot claim that they were at my circumcision. The ailing Shifrah never left far away Dvinsk and the quixotic Eliezar was constantly on the go and the Misnaged villages of Lithuania were out of bounds. Besides the snobbish Emmanuels strongly disapproved of the match. They were diehard Chassidim and my mother's family of the sterner sect. When humble Yankeh Fivah called to negotiate the marriage, he was received by the surly Sousa gruffly: "Voss vill der misnagid."

However, the persuasive Shadchan managed to prevail over pride and prejudice. Even had he not succeeded, mother said, it was a case of love at first sight.

Also, the kindliness of Yankeh Fivah captured Shlomeh Josef's heart. His own father had never been an ideal parent, and he found the homeliness and happiness he desired in Yankeh Fivah's family circle.

To this day my eighty-two year old father recalls glowingly his early married life in Plungian. On festive occasions he still chants Yankeh Fivah's sabbath hymns. These were the first melodies I learnt to fiddle as a child. My talent as a fiddler earned my parents' enthusiastic acclaim long before my ability as a plastic artist received their cautious acquiescence.

Shlomeh Josef utilised his dowry for buying and selling stuffs and trinkets, peddling far afield and gaining knowledge of men and manners, enriching his store of anecdotes, jokes, riddles and folk-songs and making little money.

A born jester and entertainer, he was much sought after at weddings and bar-mitzvahs. He could when the musicians tired of fiddling, regale the guests and machutonim with his rousing epithalamiums in rhymed couplets, drawing tears and laughter at will with his barbed innuendoes. This talent for poetising on simchas my father still possesses.

In February 1904, influenced by the glowing reports of the Plungianer pioneers, Shlomeh Josef disposed of his stock of shawls, satins and haberdashery and set out to make his fortune in the Cape of Good Hope.

I was only six months old when my father left Lithuania and my mother and I were able to join him only four-and-a-half years later in Cape Town.

Consequently my grandfather was father to me.

I remember accompanying him to his synagogue built with his own hands, or on jolly romps through glittering green woods gathering blackberries and mushrooms.

I remember sitting on his knee in the darkening afternoons and he gently, gently guiding my little hand with pencil and brush.

He taught me how to hack and cut and whittle woods and how to model funny chicks, mice, bears and moony heads with dough and candlegrease.

I "helped" him bind his big talmudic tomes, sewing, glueing, marbling with colorific blobs, blotches and zigzags that would be the envy of many a tachist of today.

He let me unlock his magic box, extract his curious seals of brass, heat them up and press them down with all my might upon the gold leaf laid upon the glossy calfskin covers.

Then what sheer delight to see the rugged, deep embossed Hebrew characters and emblems!

How I coveted that magic box, inherited by elder cousin Itzik who was killed by the Nazis! I love to believe it still exists among the recovered treasures in some Jewish museum.

Grandfather was a marvellous maker of toys. He made me scintillating cock-a-doodles with phosphorescent wings and tails, up-bobbing Wankertaukes with loaded leaden bottoms, duck-billed blunderbusses shooting feltbarbed bullets at my favourite quarries — the Rebbe's shrieking daughters.

He even made me a jingling sledge of wood and iron with star-knobbed brass rivets, the envy of all the kids who helped to push it up Shoemaker's Hill.

How happy I was in my splendid sledge, wearing my silver buttoned sheepskin coatee, purple gloves and pompom cap, whilst my mother and Malka, the nanny goat, watched and waited down the hill!

Malka provided all the sweetest, richest milk and cheese I needed. She followed me everywhere and let me pull her silly beard, and even try to climb upon her back. Once I succeeded and Malka pranced about approvingly, I lost my balance and bruised my knees. Malka was very sorry and licked away the blood.

Malka alone understood my babyish prattle long before I learnt to talk and I alone seemed to follow her plaintive, goatish murmurings.

She was the patient confidant of my inarticulate questionings long before grandpa took over.

When I began to talk and ask and understand, Yankeh Fivah always had the answer:—

"Rainbows are paint-rivers in the sky. God dips his brushes into rainbow rivers, tints trees, grasses, stones, butterflies and birds. God lights the stars to help naughty angels find their way. God sits on the sun in winter and on the moon in summer.

And eventually the question of questions:—"Grandpa, can't I see God?"

"You shall, my child, not today, not tomorrow, but one day when you are very, very old and very, very good. On that day the Rabbonah Shel Olam will say, to the purple winged Gabriel: 'Swoop down, Gabriel and bring Yisroylikkel to me!' and instantly you will be face to face with God, and He will say: 'Arise Gaspodin, and give you the biggest, shiniest box of golden seals to stamp for ever and ever all the covers of all the books in which are written all that happens in the world."

Children adored Yankeh Fivah. He was their big brother. He understood them best even when they blew out candles, hid tephillim bags, glued down gabbai's coattails, slid down bannisters, slipped herring-heads in Yom Kippur topboots, overturned snuff-boxes, or banged big stones on benches when Haman's hateful name was heard in the Chronicle of Esther.

He would pretend to be very very cross, wag his long funny finger at naughty boys and say: "Oofgehoddevett zolt ihr wekren" — may you all grow up.

And once he grabbed my best friend, Berka, the grave-digger's son, and snatched away his big black stone and gave him a marvellous dreyer instead, that sent off sparks as well as rattled.

Berka lived on the grave-yard and I used to meet him half-way in my sledge and bring him ruddy pears and bulka buns.

Berka was not afraid of Haman and knew the exact spot where he was buried and digging the black sod with his wooden spade, he would uncover Haman's hideous

MY LIFE IN THE LITHUNIAN VILLAGE

skull, stand astride, turn his terrible dreyer and shout:

"Homonn, Homonn,
"Homonn, Haroaheh,
"Foyit in drerd
"Mit ayen mishpocheh"

Haman, Haman,
The Evil Man
Rots under ground
With all his clan.

Berka had nerves of iron. Once he took me to a pigsticking. I can never forget the gruesome scene:—the giggling gathering around the steaming, gleaming copper cauldron, the squealing suckling, the red, red spurting blood reflected in their faces!

My earliest memory of human death follows: — my beautiful, sixteen-year-old aunt Glicka dying of cancer of the breast and clinging to me to the very last.

I was wrenched away and taken to the Rebbe's house. I could not play with Chanele and Merrila and stood staring through the frosty panes at the grey procession moving slowly down the slope.

Next day, Berka saw a snow-white dove hovering over Glicka's grave. She smiled like Glicka and vanished in the sky . . .

Early in 1908, mother received our passage money for South Africa and a little extra for a delightful datcha on an apple farm prior to our departure.

Red-bearded farmer Pranas called me little Solomon in Lithuanian. He would chuck me bouncing on top of his haycart, catching me in his enormous arms as I rolled over the other side, or he would mount me perilously on the bullock's horns and rescue me in the nick of time. It was his idea of toughening me up for Africa.

Soon after, at crack of dawn, grandpa woke me with the cry: "Fire! Fire!" He told me we were going to snuff out the biggest blaze ever in a far away shtetel and that Chatzkel, his assistant was already there with the "Pozarna" and I would be allowed to help him hold the squirting hoses.

Mother quickly dressed me in my brand-new sailor suit and away we drove in the tinkling troika to the frontier.

Behind the barrier stood my waving, weeping grandparents . . .

Dimmer and dimmer they became in the distance and louder and louder I cried "Zayda, Zayda" for him who was father to me and whom I would never see again.

THOUSANDS OF JEWISH CHILDREN FROM ALGERIA WERE AMONG 23,000 AT J.D.C. SUMMER CAMPS

Because many Jewish parents in Algeria earlier this year feared for the safety of their children but were themselves unable to leave the country, they sent them alone to the French mainland. As a result, several thousand Algerian Jewish children were sheltered in Joint Distribution Committee-supported summer camps in France during July and August, swelling the camp population in that country from 5,900 in 1961 to 9,000 this year, Charles H. Jordan, JDC Director-General reported this month.

In all, a total of 23,000 needy Jewish children in 15 different countries enjoyed summer vacations in camps organized with the assistance of JDC. The camps, located in Europe, North Africa, and the Middle East, were operated with the help, not only of funds but also technical aid, provided by JDC, the major American agency aiding needy Jews overseas, which receives its funds chiefly from the campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal.

The Algerian Jewish children who were sent to France alone were received and cared for by the French Jewish community until their parents could join them, Mr. Jordan said. Summer groups provided an ideal temporary solution for sheltering them. In addition, he added, many Algerian Jewish refugees, living in cramped, substandard quarters, welcomed the camp program which sent their children off on vacation and gave them greater freedom to get themselves established in France.

The next largest summer vacation program after France was organized in Poland for 3,165 Jewish children. "These summer camps are of particular importance in Poland because they bring to these youngsters the experience of Jewish solidarity and association with other Jewish youth," Mr. Jordan said. "In addition, they have an opportunity to learn something of Jewish history, tradition, customs, and songs."

An entirely new facet was added to the JDC-supported summer vacation program in Austria this year. There, in addition to almost 350 children, 146 aged persons were given a summer holiday this year.

In Sweden, summer camps were attended by needy Jewish children from all the Scandinavian countries. Contacts previously established through the camp program led to the formation of a Federation of Scandinavian Jewish Youth, which now holds its annual meeting at the end of each vacation camp year. In addition to Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Yugoslavia, JDC-supported camp programs were also organized in Australia, Iran, Morocco, and Tunisia. Mr. Jordan reported that the entire group of children on summer vacation in Australia had come from the Jewish community's home for refugee children, which is closed during the summer months.

To make these summer vacations for needy children possible, JDC funds supplemented those raised from local sources. In European countries, additional funds were provided by the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany.

Expert Sees Growth Of Love And Marriage Problems

Love, a psychologist said at St. Louis, Missouri, is the "royal road" to understanding, but most people seem to be off on very bumpy detours. Those who truly love, Dr. Walter J. Coville told the National Catholic Family Life convention, do so with their "whole personalities."

"However," said Dr. Coville, chief of clinical psychological services at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York City, reports the New York Times, "Loving with one's total personality seems to be a relatively rare phenomenon today since partners in love and in marriage experience so many difficulties in their adjustments."

And, he said, analysis of these difficulties reveals many basic incompatibilities that are overlooked in the popular, cultural misconceptions concerning love. As a practicing clinical psychologist, Dr. Coville said he had ample opportunity to observe and study husbands and wives in marital difficulties. He said he was impressed often with some of the following foibles:

The naivete of young people about the true nature of love. The common acceptance of physical compatibility as the sign of true love. The frequency with which marriage was contracted on bases other than love. How easily the relationship deteriorated after marriage. The little faith that husband and wife had in each other and their low tolerance for pain and disappointment. The tenacious pursuit of the insignificant and superficial problems of daily living as causes of the unhappiness and the lack of insight into basic causes of incompatibilities, hostilities, and resentments. The immaturity of behavior and the frequency with which their backgrounds revealed childhood-disturbed love relationships.

With all these faults, these couples did not actually seek failure in marriage, Dr. Coville said. They simply failed to be aware of their basic maladjustments, often suffered in poor love relationships with parents, or through the framework of confusion placed around the subject in the age in which they live.

"This modern age," he said, "is conducive to distorting and even destroying the essential values of life. It is an age characterized by automation, speed, atomic energy, and space conquest; life is short, but it can be made even shorter by atomic salt; success, measured by material possessions, personal status, or prestige, must be achieved in a hurry; sensual pleasures are glorified and moral inhibitions are loosed to assure immediate satisfaction."

On Sabbath nights, in many Jewish homes in Canada, a decanter of Mazel Tov wine finds its place on the starched tablecloth, right beside the challah.

Mazel Tov is a wine with a taste you'll 'remember', a ruby red, richly sweet 'kiddush' wine made of Concord grapes grown in the vineyards of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year, for every "simcha".

DEFENSIVE ARMS FOR ISRAEL

The New York Herald Tribune says:

Of the American decision to sell anti-aircraft missiles to Israel it can be said that Washington is demonstrating (a) its determination to keep the new Middle Eastern state on a strong defensive footing against hostile neighbors and (b) its concern over current trends and tendencies in the area.

Some of these trends point unmistakably in the direction of an Egyptian build-up of offensive strength, particularly in the field of rockets and jet bombers. This has been accomplished through stepped-up Soviet deliveries of war goods to the Nasser government.

Since the Egyptian dictator has as many enemies within the Arab world as outside of it, the increase in his armed power is worrisome to more than one government. But since his prime target and the rallying cry for his Arab nationalism campaign have always been Israel, the concern of the Israelis is understandable. And if Washington has come to the point of actually supplying defensive weapons, it seems evident that the Israelis are more than justified in their estimate of the situation.

The government of the United States is doing its best to remain on good terms with the United Arab Republic, which has been the beneficiary of widespread American aid. But it cannot remain blind to a build-up of offensive power by forces which all too often have proclaimed a warlike aim.

It's conceivable that Cairo may object bitterly to the shipment of defensive arms to Israel. But it must surely realize that what we have done is to put into concrete and practical terms our concern for Middle Eastern peace.

A.F.L.-C.I.O. DENOUNCES ANTI-SEMITIC OUTBREAKS IN LATIN AMERICA

A resolution denouncing the recent anti-Semitic outbreaks in Argentina and Uruguay was unanimously adopted by the New York State AFL-CIO at its convention at the Commodore Hotel in New York. The resolution called on the two Latin American governments to take "vigorous steps to prevent any recurrence of the anti-Semitic incidents. "This Convention records its great concern and outrage at the spread of Nazi-type activities and incidents that have occurred in the last two months in both Argentina and Uruguay.

"We feel that these outbursts of violence constitute a real threat to the freedom and well-being of the entire Argentine and Uruguayan nations. We condemn the attitude of those authorities in Argentina and Uruguay who have been minimizing the danger and defending the very organizations that are responsible for the outrages."

In adopting the resolution, the 2,000 delegates voted to "call upon the free trade unions of the republics of Argentina and Uruguay to adopt all necessary measures to eradicate all remnants of anti-Semitism and to prevent any recurrences of neo-Nazism."

Previously, the National AFL-CIO expressed its position on this issue when the president, George Meany, in a letter to Dr. Roberto T. Alemann, Argentine Ambassador to the U.S., said: "We of the AFL-CIO strongly urge the Argentine democratic authorities to preserve the good name of their country and the freedom of their people by promptly taking the most vigorous steps for preventing the recurrence of anti-Semitic violence.

"We appeal to the free trade unions and the other democratic forces of our great sister republic to take the lead in rallying the Argentinian people for the necessary measures to uproot every vestige of anti-Semitism as a manifestation of neo-Nazism. Its false dogmas are perniciously alien to the aspirations and interests of the Argentinian people. Its inhuman deeds are a grave danger to the progress of Argentina as a healthy and prosperous democracy, cooperating with the other freedom-loving nations of the New World for the peace, freedom, and well-being of all the people of the Americas."

Rosh Hashonah In the U.S. Congressional Record

ROSH HASHONAH

Mr. Humphrey. Mr. President, with coming of Rosh Hashonah and the high holidays that usher in the New Year, the thoughts of men of good will everywhere turn to the Jewish people, to their long history of suffering heroically borne, and to their stubborn attachment to the ideals of strict morality, intellectual integrity, religious faith, and cultural identity.

America must never forget that Jewish heroes were involved in the founding of our Nation, and have fought bravely in every one of our wars. Neither must America forget that Old Testament principles, treasured and handed down to us by Jewish people through the ages entered into the thinking of those who formed our colonies, those who spoke and worked for our national independence, and those who devised our Federal Constitution.

It is therefore to no strangers or guests among us, but to brothers, that we speak when we bid the Jewish people of America "Happy New Year" at the start of the year 5723. We respect and admire these centuries of Jewish achievements and contributions.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The Presiding Officer. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. Humphrey. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The Presiding Officer. Without objection, it is so ordered.

New Christian Group Formed For Friendship With Israel, And Arab-Israel Peace

The formation of the American Christian Association for Israel was announced by its president, Dr. Howard M. LeSourd. The Association is a national educational and philanthropic organization seeking to promote friendship and understanding between the Christians of America and the people of Israel, and to advance the cause of Arab-Israel peace.

The statement of principles of the new organization declares: "We shall devote ourselves to the presentation and interpretation of Israel's vital role as a democratic force in the world of today, and as a nation with an indispensable mission in saving a people and redeeming the Holy Land.

"In the troubled context of our current world we hail Israel as a land of freedom under God. It is on the side of free men in the struggle against totalitarianism of all kinds. We count it among our allies as a nation dedicated to liberty, justice, and peace. We assume as part of our Christian duty the obligation to welcome its contribution and to contribute to its growth."

In a special statement announcing the new organization, Dr. LeSourd declared that "the ACAI will seek to advance the cause of peace and brotherhood in the Middle East that both Israelis and Arabs may, in fellowship, overcome the ancient and pressing problems of this storied area of the world."

Lectures and special studies will mark the group's program. The first research project scheduled is an investigation of the subject: "What is the relationship of anti-Zionism and anti-Israelism to anti-Semitism?"

Dr. LeSourd, president, was formerly Dean of the Graduate School and later of the School of Public Relations and Communications at Boston University, and is currently consultant to the Development Department of the Protestant Council of the City of New York. From 1944 to 1947 he was Director of the American Christian Palestine Committee.

The first public meeting of the ACAI will be a luncheon meeting presenting Pastor Heinrich Gruber, of Berlin, anti-Nazi clergyman who saved the lives of many European Jews and who testified at the Eichmann trial in Jerusalem.

The statement of Dr. LeSourd follows:

"The American Christian Association for Israel is an educational organization seeking to foster a positive understanding of Israel and to help overcome hostile or prejudicial attitudes wherever they exist. Israel, created by act of the United Nations, is performing an indispensable function; as the haven of the survivors of Hitler's Europe and in more recent years as the sanctuary of hundreds of thousands of dispossessed Jews from behind the Iron Curtain and from the Arab and Moslem Lands. With only 8,000 square miles of territory, about the size of New Jersey, and a receiving population of 650,000, Israel has successfully absorbed a population of refugees and displaced peoples that totals well over a million persons.

"Dignity and opportunity are now the possession of these people who otherwise would even today represent an unsolved problem for the Free World. They are an arresting exhibit of the power of democratic institutions and values to mold lives and rebuild a wasted land.

"Israel's example has already proved an inspiration to a significant number of Asian-African lands. Indeed, Israel has demonstrated that an under-developed land, with assistance, well-managed, and hard work, can become a sharing nation. No wonder Russia, anxious to prove the sterility of the Western democracies, finds Israel's phenomenal success such a threat to her hopes of a Communist conquest of under-developed areas and peoples, and therefore expands its efforts to encourage continued Arab hostility.

"The American Christian Association for Israel hopes that the Arab states will, in like measure, come to manage their tremendous resources of land, oil, and manpower, so that their many peoples, both refugee and non-refugee, may enjoy the fruits of a prosperous and peaceful civilization.

"Accordingly, the American Christian Association for Israel will seek to advance the cause of peace and brotherhood in the Middle East that both Israelis and Arabs may, in fellowship, overcome the ancient and pressing problems of this storied area of the world."
